ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This thesis has been completed with the contribution and help from persons, institutions, and the villagers of Ban Dok Dang, to whom I wish to express my deepest gratitude and my special thanks to every one who took part in the completion of my thesis.

I would like to express my deep appreciation and my sincere gratitude to Prof. Dr. Yos Santasombat, my thesis supervisor, for his encouragement and invaluable advise throughout my research period. My appreciation must also be extended to Lecturer Shalardchai Ramitanondh and Assistant Prof. Dr. Jamaree Chiengthong for their kind acceptance in being my committee member for their great contribution to the process of my thesis from the proposal until completion.

I would also like to express my gratitude to the expert team of lecturer at the Regional Center for Social Science and Sustainable Development (RCSD), Dr. Pong-In Rakariyatham, Dean of Faculty of Social Sciences. Dr. Anan Ganjanapan, Dr. Chayan Vaddanaphuti, Dr. Phrek Gypmantasiri, Dr. Chusak Wittayapak Dr. Santita GanJanapan, Dr. Ancharee Singhanetra, Ajarn Benja Jirapatpimal and Dr. Sidthinat Prabudnhanitisan, for their fruitful teaching, advice valuable knowledge, and their encouraging support in my study.

I would like to express my deepest gratitude to Fr. Niphot Tienvihan, the director of Research and Training Center for Religio-Cultural Community (RTRC) for his support and enthusiastic encouragement during my study. And, I would like to thank Dr. Kanoksak Kaewthep who introduced me to study at RCSD. I also would like to thank my organization, the Chiang Mai Diocesan Social Action Center (DISAC-CM) and the Committee of Women Commission, especially my colleagues for their comments, suggestions and for taking responsibility during my study.

I would like to also thank my lovely friends of the RCSD students: Tubtim, Yoshimi, Su Yufang, Piseth, Thanh and others for their friendship and concern each other during our study. Many thanks to the RCSD - staff for their good work in supporting my study.

I would like to thank to the alumna of the Social Development Department of Chiang Mai University (CMU) for their kindness in supporting and helping me in the process of my study until my thesis came to completion, and those who helped me with English. My special thanks to the Mrs. Lara Johnson, editor, for efficient and helpful editing of my thesis.

I am grateful to my parents and family-members for the love and concern they gave me in supporting and contributing numerous things during my study and in encouraging me to complete it.

My sincere gratitude goes furthermore to all villagers of Ban Dok Dang, whom I have met, for their warm welcome and kindness I received through their friendly relationship during my stay in the village. Especially, the women, Chomporn family, Pa Ai po and Nau Ka po who invested their time in providing me valuable data and information for my thesis.

I shall never forget the great support I received from all the above mentioned persons, institutions and villagers. It is for me an encouragement for ongoing study with people, especially women, in the future.

I would like to express my sincere gratitude again to every one who has assisted in my thesis completion.

Finally, I would like to ask all the blessing from God for all who have supported me through the process of this study.
