ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Development and completion of this thesis and my graduate study were possible only with enormous support and contribution from the people and the institutions in both Thailand and China.

My deepest thanks and profound appreciation go to Dr. Uraivan Tan-Kim-Yong, my academic supervisor as well as chairperson of the thesis committee for her immeasurable guidance, suggestions and delightful behavior. I am really indebted for her dedication throughout development of this thesis, carefulness of my lives here and my career in future. I would like to express my special thanks and appreciation to Dr. Anan Ganjanapan and Dr. Chusak Wittayapak for their invaluable comments and suggestions in guiding me for conceptualizing the thesis proposal and the development of this thesis. All of their constructive instruction, deep discussions and enthusiastic encouragement during the research preparation, fieldwork and thesis writing made a great contribution to the completion of this research project.

Genuine gratitude and profound appreciation also go to Dr. Chayan Vaddhanaphuti and Dr. Sidthinat prabudhanitisarn for their creative and constructive discussion on my thesis topic and conceptualization of the thesis proposal. I would like to extend thanks and appreciation go to Dr. Yos Santasombat and Dr. Pinkaew Laungaramsri for their invaluable comments on the development of thesis proposal. My heartfelt thanks also go to Dr. Jesse C. Ribot for offering me two of his critical articles related to commodity chain analysis and the concept of access, which help me to make a great development in thesis proposal.

My graduate study would not have been possibly completed without support from the Regional Center for Social Sciences and Sustainable Development

(RCSD), Chaing Mai University for waiving my tuition in the second academic year. Particularly, special thanks are extended to Dr. Pong-In Rakariyatham, all of RCSD committee members, professors, staffs and RCSD office directors Ajarn Benja Jirapatpimal and Kanchanan Kulpisithcharoen. I am grateful for the support of Institute of International Education (IIE, funded by Ford Foundation) for funding my fieldwork and RCSD for funding the documentation of this thesis.

All my RCSD friends have shown their genuine kindness and friendship during my study. Particularly, I had received a number of supports both in forms of finance and morality from my Chinese friends: Su Yufang, Ma Jianzhong, Li Zhinan, Yang congming, Zhang Jie and Huang Juan. And, I has also learned considerable experiences from Su Yufang in graduate study. It was my luck getting to know these friends, and Zhang Man, Li Fei, Chen Yahui during study in Chiang Mai. Tubtim, Piseth and my Vietnamese classmate also extended their kind assistance to me during my graduate study. I highly appreciate their contributions.

Finally, for their greatest love love, support, encouragement and understandings over the years, which can not be expressed by words, the study is dedicated to my parents with grateful thanks and deepest love.
