ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I am very grateful to the Faculty of Nursing, Chiang Mai University for giving me permission to leave my work to study so that I have valuable academic experience. Also I wish to express my deep appreciation and sincere gratitude to many individuals who have involved the process of doing my dissertation throughout the years.

Firstly, I particularly grateful and thank all co researchers from CCU, Maharaj Nakorn Chiang Mai Hospital in this long process of doing dissertation who willing gave their time to participate and share with immeasurable experiences. Their contributions of invaluable aspects of past experiences were beneficial for the practical protocol development.

I would like to first express my deep appreciation to Associate professor Dr. Wichit Srisuphan, the former chair of nursing graduate school, Faculty of Nursing Chiang Mai University, for her greatest moral support and thoughtfulness throughout this long study.

My sincerest appreciation is expressed to Associate Professor Dr. Linchong Pothiban, academic advisor and chairperson of the dissertation committee. She always shows great intent, concern and support in my progress and development. Her attentions to the correction and constructive criticism have greatly molded this dissertation into its present shape. My sincere gratitude also goes to my co-advisors, Assistant Professor Dr. Paungpayom Panya and Associate Professor Dr. Chawapornpan Chanprasit for their advice, thoughtfulness, moral support and friendship which was helpful.

It was great honor for me when Professor Apichart Sukonthasarn from Department of Internal Medicine, Faculty of Medicine, Chiang Mai University, accepted the invitation to serve as a co advisor from my dissertation. His valuable critiques and suggestions have greatly improved the method of study. His reflection on my proposal has strengthened this study.

My sincere thank go to Assistant Professor Dr. Warunee Fongkaew and Assistant Professor Dr. Taweeluk Vannarit, the former Head of Department and the current Head of Department of Medical Nursing, Chiang Mai University, for providing me with time to work on the dissertation writing. I wish to thank my colleagues at Medical Department who has shouldered heavier teaching loads to enable me to complete this work.

I appreciate to the constructive criticism of Dr. Ouyporn Tonmukayakul, from Nursing Administration Department, Faculty of Nursing, Chiang Mai University. Her comments, suggestions and questions urged me to think more critically on my work. She also encouraged me to complete my dissertation writing. My gratitude is extended to Professor Dr. Somchit Hanuchareunkul for her constructive questions and criticism of this final paper. Her invaluable thoughtful suggestions have strengthened to my dissertation.

I am very grateful to the Ministry of University Affairs in the providing financial support for my dissertation. My gratitude is also extended to my doctoral classmates for enhancing the joy of learning by sharing this worthwhile experience.

Last but not least, the completion of this dissertation would not have been possible without the encouragement, endless support and care of my family....mother, sister, brother and nephews. They have been a wonderful source of strength and inspiration during the long educational process.
