ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

This dissertation would not have been possible without the help of many people, to whom I owe much gratitude. I would like to take this opportunity to acknowledge these people.

I am very grateful to my dissertation committee, Associate Professor Dr. Chawapornpan Chanprasit, Assistant Professor Dr. Tipaporn Wonghongkul, Professor Malai Muttarak, and Professor Dr. Laurel Northouse for their advice, guidance, support, and time which helped me to complete this dissertation research. I am and will always be grateful to Professor Dr. Wichit Srisuphan for her valuable suggestions on my study and her continual support since I began as a faculty member at Faculty of Nursing, Chiang Mai University as well as for providing me an opportunity to seek doctoral education. I offer special thanks to Professor Dr. Somchit Hanucharunkul for her direction, valuable suggestions and comments, and encouragement throughout the length of this research study. I would also like to thank all these experts for their suggestions and approval of the instrument used in this study.

I am also deeply grateful to the staff at the surgery outpatient department at the Maharaj Nakorn Chiang Mai Hospital, the university hospital, Lumpang Regional Cancer Center, and Nakornping Hospital, the provincial hospital, who were very kind and helpful. My thanks also go to Instructor Jakkapob Dhatsuwan for his suggestions on data analysis. My sincere thanks go to Instructor Chalinee Suvanayos for her great help and time to conduct a self-help group and to be a co-leader in a self-help group sessions.

I would also like to thank six master students for their helping during the data collection procedure.

My sincere gratitude goes to the Faculty of Nursing, Chiang Mai University for allowing me the time to complete my doctoral program. My very special thanks to my colleagues at department of medical nursing, Chiang Mai University, who shared academic responsibilities among themselves while I was away studying full time in the doctoral program. I am also extremely grateful to the Ministry of University Affairs for providing me a scholarship grant for my whole study at the Faculty of Nursing, Chiang Mai University and at School of Nursing, University of Michigan. My thanks also go to the Graduate School, Chiang Mai University, for providing a partial support grant for this dissertation research.

I am grateful to my beloved friend, Assistant Professor Nadia Ali Charania, a doctoral colleague from the University of Michigan, School of Nursing with whom I shared wonderful and valuable experiences in both personal and academic endeavors. I would like to thank her for listening and providing valuable suggestions when I struggled to study or write my proposal. I am and will forever appreciate her support, encouragement, and love. My heartfelt thanks go to Assistant Professor Dr. Charuwan Kritpracha for her continuous kind assistance, support, and love as a real sister.

I would like to express my sincere thanks to Associate Professor Dr. Pikul Nantachaipan, Mrs. Suparuck Sinlapravat, Miss Wipa Norasettada, Dr. Jeanne Raisler, and my doctoral classmates for their continuous encouragement. My deepest thanks and appreciation also go to Dr. Pratima Budtharovat, Jill Richert, and Sharon Favazza. Thank you for their time and effort which helped me to edit my dissertation. Many individuals supported me throughout the researching and writing of this dissertation, I cannot say everyone's name, but I would like to thank all of them.

My heartfelt appreciation goes to Assistant Professor Usanee Jintrawet for being there with me during the hard time of writing my dissertation as well as for kind words and encouragement that always bolstered my spirits and helped me get back to work on my dissertation. My words cannot express how much I appreciate her support. Special thanks to Associate Professor Dr. Punpilai Sriareporn for her kind support, encouragement, and always being there with me in both happy and difficult situations since I began my doctoral study.

My deepest thanks and appreciation go to the women who participated in the experimental group. I want to thank them for their time, taking trouble to come and participate in the intervention program, and providing inspiration throughout this research project. My special thanks go to the women who participated in the control group for their acceptance to participate in the study and their time to complete the questionnaires without meeting me before. Their contributions made this study happen. I hope this dissertation will give each of my study participants something in return.

Finally, most of all, my deepest gratitude is expressed to my beloved parents, my sister and her family for their unconditional love, support, and encouragement. The completion of my doctoral education is a proof of how important their love and support has been for me. The success of this endeavor is theirs.
