ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The creation of this study is the fruitful effort of a few years of work and struggle as well as happiness. I would like to thank all those who support, patience, and encouragement made it possible to continue when difficulties made no apparent end to the dissertation seem possible.

A nice opportunity in my life has been provided by Thai Red Cross Society, College of Nursing Thai Red Cross Society, for allowing me the time and financial support needed throughout my Ph.D. program of study at Faculty of Nursing, Chiang Mai University. Special thanks go to Assistant Professor Chuleeporn Chaomethakit, and Assistant Professor Aungkana Sariyaporn, the administrative team of College of Nursing Thai Red Cross Society, for their concern and support, and also to my colleagues in The Department of Fundamentals of Nursing, College of Nursing Thai Red Cross Society for sharing my responsibilities among themselves while I was studying that enabling me to study full time.

Although they must remain anonymous, I am indebted to all research participants, whose openness and honesty made this doctoral dissertation possible. My deepest gratitude goes to these families of stroke survivors for their willingness to share their time and lived experiences with me. Further more, I am also indebted to all 14 stroke survivors, who have still alive and passed way, for their very wonderful resource of life experiences and lessons.

I have been fortunate to have received extremely helpful comments on this dissertation and would like to thank Associate Professor Dr.Warunee Fongkaew, Assistant Professor Dr.Paungpayom Panya, and Associate Professor Wilawan Senaratana my expert advisory team from Faculty of Nursing, Chiang Mai University. I have been given their time, valuable experience, intellectual guidance, and encouragement during my study. I also apologize if I was not able to take up all of the points made. Any errors or skewed perspectives are my own. My sincerest gratitude also goes to Associate Professor Dr. Wichit Srisuphan and all teachers in our doctoral program who teach and transfer me a huge good things to let me be a quality member in our society and nursing profession.

The study was partially supported by the School of Graduate Studies at Chiang Mai University. Importantly, I am ever grateful to The Thai Research Fund (TRF), National Health Foundation, which provided me with financial assistance throughout the project. I am very grateful to the International Network of Doctoral Education in Nursing (INDEN) for providing a scholarship grant for my participating and presentation my proposal at Lund University, Sweden.

A special gratitude is expressed to Associate Professor Dr. Narujorn-Assistant Professor Nuananong Ittitherajarus for their assistance, suggestions, and concerns. I also would like to thank to Professor Manee Payaomyong, Associate Professor Dr. Narujohn Ititeerajarus, and Dr. Phra Mahar Boonchaury, who provided me information regarding family in Lanna culture. My sincere thanks is expressed to all persons: Mr. Kovit Bunlikitkul, Mr. Komol Bunlikitkul, Mr. Suriyo Ya-gname, and Nong Puang, for their careful reading and helpful comments concerning and English approving in this study.

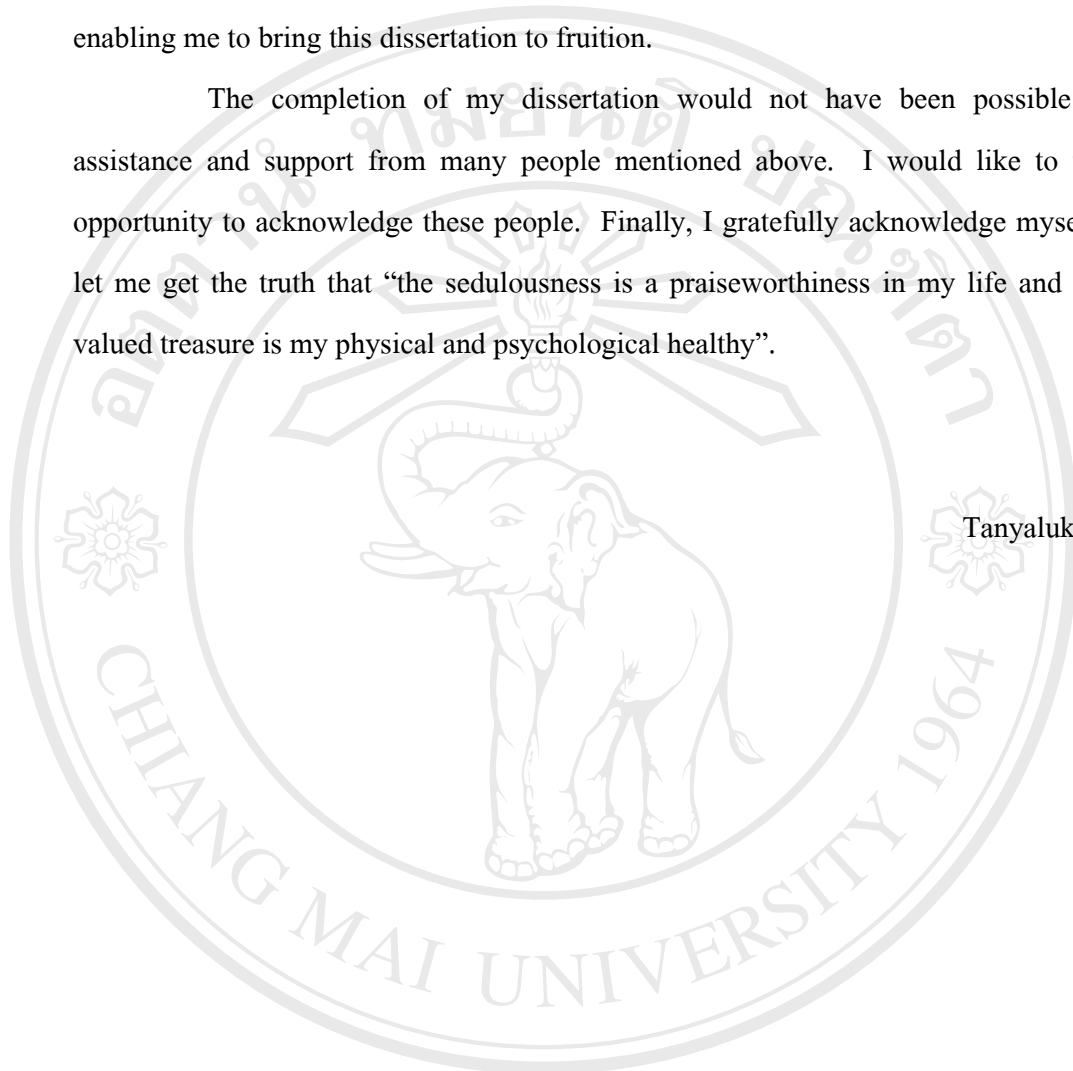

My sincere thanks are extended to many important people who involved in my research including the head and ward staffs of the rehabilitation ward at Maharaj Nakorn Chiang Mai, Home Health Care team of Faculty of Nursing, CMU. and Nakornping Hospital, the health volunteers of communities in the municipal area of Chiang Mai, and all teachers and friends for their well cooperation and assistance in the process of data collection. Many thanks are to staffs of The Institute of Population Statistic in Chiang Mai for helping with information regarding statistic of population in Chiang Mai.

Last but not least, I acknowledge our families, Obe-om, Bunlikitkul, and Tuksrisuk's families, for all they have provided valuable assistance and support throughout the project. Our gratitude to my parents, Mr. Kawee and Mrs. Lawan Obe-om, who taught me, firsthand, about family dynamics, and for their endless true love, which extremely valuable, my sisters, Mrs. Wannapa Tuksrisuk, Miss Tanawan Obe-om for their deep connection and hearteningly support, and Mr. Nara Bunlikitkul for his power of love heartily provided to me. Also, I appreciate the emotional support provided by friends, enabling me to bring this dissertation to fruition.

The completion of my dissertation would not have been possible without assistance and support from many people mentioned above. I would like to take this opportunity to acknowledge these people. Finally, I gratefully acknowledge myself which let me get the truth that “the sedulousness is a praiseworthiness in my life and the most valued treasure is my physical and psychological healthy”.
