For the past two and half years, I have spent my life in Chiang Mai, an ancient capital of Northern Thailand. During this period I must say that I have learned a lot not just in terms of academic but also in terms of social and culture as well. I believe on a long run, it is going to be useful for me, my works and my country.

First of all, I would like to express my sincere thanks to the Electricity Authority of Thailand (EGAT), Electricité Du Laos (EdL) and Chiang Mai University (CMU) for providing me the scholarship and financial support through the Technical Cooperation Project. Excellent assistance is being provided all the time. Secondly, I am much indebted to my advisors, Ajaan Dr. Kanok Rerkasem and Ajaan Dr. Sidthinat Prabudhanitisarn, for their interests and guidance during my field research study, and completion of this thesis. The time they spent on supervising my works, exchanging their views and reading my manuscripts, their critical comments and invaluable suggestions are most gratefully acknowledged. Sincere thanks to my thesis committers, Dr. Jureerat Thomas, Dr. Nathan Badenoch, who ever working hard to review and providing comments of this thesis. Thirdly, I like to thanks all of government officials met in the fields for providing me in-sight information and secondary data available in the offices. Support from Theun-Hinboun Power Company during field visits and traveling with my advisors are acknowledged. Without Mr. Bounma Molakhasouk, EMD manager and all his staffs who were working hard in assisting me and providing me with all information and facilities at the Theun-Hinboun Site, this thesis will never been completed without them. I am also pleased to send my sincere thanks to all villagers and farmers in Sobngouang who have really giving and kindly shared their data, information and fully cooperating in every working day there.

Great assistance from Lao experts such as a Botanist specialist, Ajaan Mr. Khamseng Nanthavong from Faculty of Forestry, National University of Laos (NOUL) who helped me on identified trees and converted tree name from local to scientific name. Soil specialist, Mr. Phouthone Thammavong from Soil Survey and Classification Center, National Agriculture and Forestry Research Institute (NAFRI) who helped me identified soil in Sobngouang is highly acknowledged.

I will never forget to all care, logistic support and assistant has been always provided me from Dr. Suthep Lertsrimongkol, Assistant Director and his staff at Sirikit Hydro Power Plant-Operation, Dr. Atipoang Nuntaphan and his staff at Maemoh Training Center, Ajaan Yongyut Chaiboon and his staff at the Faculty of Engineering, Chiang Mai University.

At Maejo University, special thanks to Ajaan Drs. Orathai Mingthiphol and Dr. Kriangsak Sri-Ngernyuang for their consultation during my thesis proposal preparation and data analysis for this thesis.

At Faculty of Social Sciences, I am grateful and appreciated to all professors who have taught and shared their knowledge and experiences. Logistic support at CMU/SLUSE and MJU/SLUSE centers from Khun Nitiya Wongweerapant, Khun Kasinawat Wongweerapant, Khun Khet Siripan, Khun Asaya Thepsiri in both field practices and office working are highly appreciated. I thank Ajaan Benjavan

Rerkasem, the team leader of the McKnight Project at CMUPNlab, for her support during my stay in Chiang Mai. I greatly appreciate technical supports received from Mr. Sittichai Lordkaew and Mrs Kanchanaporn Lordkaew for the analysis of plant samples. The great extend of thanks are to all my colleague of all students from SLUSE who sharing the class works, filed works and all fun together. Special thanks to Khun Saipim Channuan, her joints field activity in Sobngouang and shares of data for the presentation this thesis are kindly acknowledged. World Agroforestry Centre (ICRAF-Thailand), Khun David Thomas and all his staffs who had provided me opportunity to access excellent library and give me all assistance. I am indebted to many people whom I met and discussed about my thesis and their names are not possible to list here. Thanks to all.

Finally, the support from my family in Laos, which I received from my parents, Mr. Oun Visounnarath and Mrs. Amphong Visounnarath and my wife, Mrs. Dalavanh Visounnarath, have been enormous help to overcome all difficulties and hard time I have ever faced.
