ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

First, I would like to express my gratitude to Professor Emeritus Dr. Wichit Srisuphan, Professor Dr. Wipada Kunaviktikul and Dr. Orn-Anong Wichaikhum, for being excellence teachers and advisors. They always listened to me, contributed time to share their thoughts, and inspired my thinking and the development of my dissertation. I am also grateful to Professor Dr. Linda H. Aiken who is an excellent mentor and has opened my perspective to international view. I wish to thank Assoc. Prof. Dr. Yupin Aungsuroch and Assoc. Prof. Dr. Wanida Wanant who allowed me to use 2007 Thai Data set and have given many significant suggestions. Thanks all above mentioned teachers for their believing in me and providing me with valuable opportunities. I also extend my thanks to examining committee: Assoc. Prof. Dr. Suchittra Luangamornlert, Assoc. Prof. Dr. Linchong Pothiban, and Assoc. Prof. Dr. Tipaporn Wonghongkul for their thoughtful comments on my dissertation. I wish to thank Asst. Prof. Dr. Sukon Prasitwattanaseree for his statistical advice. I would like to thank the Ministry of Education for funding my doctoral education.

I am thankful to faculty and staff at the Center for Health Outcomes and Policy Research, University of Pennsylvania for sharing their expertise in my work, particularly, Drs. Ann Kutney-Lee, Allison Squires, Robert J. Lucero, and Lusine Poghosyan for their fabulous friendship. Special thanks to Tim Cheney for his excellent teaching the statistical analysis skill. I am also grateful to Dr. Marjorie Muecke, Assistant Dean, Global Health Affairs, University of Pennsylvania for her superior support when I was at Penn.

I would like to thank PhD. friends and my friends in past and present who have been there to support me. Thanks for sharing the different thoughts and experience for overcome this education. I would like to thank all PhD. staff who facilitated the document process.

Finally, many thanks to my family, my father who let me know the importance of education, my mother who is my role model of diligence and patience, and my sister who always listens to me. As well as Nantsupawat family who helped me to raise my little children and supported me during my doctoral journey. My lovely children, Poonyapat and Preyanan, who are my inspiration and never let me give up. And I wish to thank my husband, Teerachet, who has been right by my side during this journey.
