ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

This dissertation was prepared with the help of the following people. With profound gratitude and sincerity, I wish to acknowledge them, without their help, advice and support, this dissertation would not have been completed.

I would like to express my deepest gratitude and appreciation to my chief advisor, Assoc. Prof. Dr. Ampai Panthong for her excellent instruction, guidance, encouragement, valuable advice and generous help in writing this thesis as well as for her strong support of my studies.

I am greatly indebted to all staffs of the Department of Pharmacology, Faculty of Medicine, Chiang Mai University, especially Dr. Natthakarn Chiranthanut and Dr. Parirat Khonsung, my thesis co-advisors, for giving me valuable suggestion and recommendation. My appreciation is also extended to Assoc. Prof. Dr. Nirush Lertprasertsuke, Department of Pathology, Faculty of Medicine, Chiang Mai University, Assoc. Prof. Dr. Siriwan Ongchai and Dr. Ariyaphong Wongnoppavich, Department of Biochemistry, Faculty of Medicine, Chiang Mai University, and Assist. Prof. Dr. Seewaboon Sireeratawong, Division of Pharmacology, Department of Preclinical Science, Faculty of Medicine, Thammasat University, for their instruction and assistance of laboratory techniques.

I owe special thanks to Assoc. Prof. Dr. Chaichan Sangdee for English proof-reading this thesis and to Assoc. Prof. Dr. Noppamas Soonthornchareonnon, Department of Pharmacognosy, Faculty of Pharmacy, Mahidol University for providing the standardized water extract of P. emblica fruits prepared according to Thai Herbal Pharmacopoeia.

I would like to express my sincere thanks to the Thailand Research Fund (TRF) for awarding me the Royal Golden Jubilee Ph.D. Program Scholarship (Grant No. PHD/0269/2550) and also to the National Research Council of Thailand for providing research financial support.

Finally, I am sincerely grateful to my family for their love, understanding, and encouragement to make this study a reality.
