ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

No dissertation is the result of a single individual's isolated effort; in this particular case, more people have been involved in the development of this project than can possibly be acknowledged here – though I must mention at least some of those without whom this project would not have come to fruition. First and foremost, I would like to thank all the Lue monks, novices, former monks and former novices, lay men and women who not only patiently tolerated my presence in Sipsong Panna after I first visited them in January 2004, but also granted me their warm friendship – a friendship that I trust will continue into the future. Among several dozen individuals who helped me, I want to thank in particular my friends Ai Khamngoen and Khanan Sam Sao, whose 'insider' opinions and views on Lue Buddhism have deeply influenced my own. I have also learnt much from Jin Hanfeng, from the Ethnic Bureau of Religions and Khanan Kang - probably my closest and most patient friends over the years, and to them I give my sincere appreciation for their time and friendship.

My intellectual debt remains with the counsel I obtained from the numerous Professors working at the Department of Sociology and Anthropology, the Faculty of Social Sciences, Chiang Mai University (CMU), all of whom took part in the MA program to varying degrees, and especially with my two supervisors, Prof. Apinya Feungfusakul and Prof. Pinkaew Luangaramsri. Apart from them, I would like to mention Professors Chusak Wittayapak, Ekamol Saichan, Jamaree Chienthong, Kuanchewan Buadeang, Wasan Panyakaew and Wattana Sugunnasil, for sharing with me their knowledge, expertise and friendship. The whole project, and the fieldwork which served as its basis, would not have been possible without the support of the Regional Center for Social Science and Sustainable Development (RCSD) and its Director, the admirable Dr. Chayan Vaddhanaphuti, and my appreciation is also extended to all the personnel working at the Center - for their kind help during my research, and in particular Muttika Thungsuphuti (Pi Pong), Kanchana (Pi Oy) and Gary Morrison - the English language editor at the Center. Finally, I would like to show my appreciation to all my classmates and the other students who have participated in the program, and whom I have been lucky enough to meet during my time at CMU.

As well as learning from the scholars and students at CMU, my views on Sipsong Panna Buddhism have benefited enormously from ongoing conversations with other specialists who work in the region and in Thailand, including: Thomas Borchert, Sara Davis, Antonella Diana, Grant Evans, Louis Gabaude (the Chair of my Examining Committee) and Prof. Rujaya Abhakorn. I must also acknowledge the invaluable intellectual and moral support provided by my mentors and friends Timmi Tillman and Maruja Salas, as well as Heather Peters and David Feingold, all of whom are of course exempted from any responsibility in terms of shortcomings within my paper.

Last but not least, my stay in Asia would have not been possible without the support of my parents, Pedro and Rosa Nieves, and my sister Rosa, and that of many friends, ordained or not, back in Spain, in China and Thailand.

To all of them, yin dee lai lai!
