ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I wish to express my gratitude to villagers and local activists whose names appear in the dissertation in pseudonyms for their safety. They gave me their friendship and warmth during the time I carried out my fieldwork in the villages. I wish to dedicate this work to them.

I owe a debt, a special gratitude to my advisor, Lecturer Dr. Santita Ganjanapan, who devoted invaluable time to help me develop and correct all versions of my proposal and first draft of the thesis – reading and giving me crucial comments and enthusiastically encouraging me to improve my work. My gratitude goes to my co-advisors: Professor Dr. Yos Santasombat, who gave me ideas and advice to conceptualize my study, and Assistant Professor Dr. Pinkaew Laungaramsri, who offered valuable advice for my dissertation.

I am grateful to Professor Dr. Anan Ganjanapan, whose insightful knowledge and experience assisted me in my thoughts throughout my academic work. I also gratefully appreciate Dr. Ronald D. Renard, who gave me valuable advice for improvement of the dissertation. A special word of thanks goes to Associate Professor Dr. Jamaree Chiengthong, who provided me with suggestions for improvement of the research. Thanks are due to Dr. Kanchewan Boudaeng, who gave me questions and suggestions during comprehensive examination.

I am very much thankful to my teachers at the Ph.D. Program and Social Science and the Regional Center for Social Science and Sustainable Development (RCSD), Faculty of Social Sciences, Chiang Mai University, especially Ajarn Phrek Gypmantasiri, who taught and encouraged me to explore academic fields. My appreciation goes to the program staff members, particularly Sasiwimon Keawdee, Narita Chaithima for their great support and friendship. I am thankful to GEO-INFORMATIS and Space Technology Centre Northern Region, Geography Department, Faculty of Social Sciences, Chiang Mai University for supporting me with database of topographical maps.

I am indebted to the Southeast Asian Studies Regional Exchange Program (SEASREP Foundation) for its provision of research grant under the SEASREP Luisa

Mallari Fellowship for Ph.D. Research in Southeast Asian Studies Program, and also The South-South Exchange Programme for Research on History of Development (SEPHIS) financial support for my workshop on Alternative Research Methodologies in Philippines. I would like to express my thanks to Dr. Maria Serena I. Diokno, the Executive Director of SEASREP, and Ms. Imelda Adante, the Program Officer.

Thanks are due to all my friends, in particular to Dr. Atchara Rukyutidhram, who made provocative suggestions and comments, Dr. To Xuan Phuc, who accompanied me during the beginning of field survey, Puttipong Nawakijbamrung, who gave me technical support when I needed, Dr. Yuki Miyake, who gave me an important book. I wish to express my thanks to Dr. Anusorn Unno, who provided me his provocative dissertation and Tanasak Phosrikun, who helped me to download material books and articles for thesis conceptualization. I am also deeply thankful for the great support of my classmates Dr. Nguyen Quang Tuyen and Kanokporn Deeburee. I owe special thanks to Kamon Sukin and Wichean Unprasert, who first discussed and suggested to me that the work on the Thai-Burmese border could be characterized in the image of “in-between lives.” I thank to Ajan Suriya Smutkupt and Sopida Werakultawan, who supported and discussed with me during the time I was writing the theoretical discussion part of the thesis. I am indebted to Nguyen Thi Kim Cuc for her transcribing the data information and to Manee and Sowan (pseudonyms) for their assistance in the field.

My respectful thanks are given to my colleagues for their strong support and encouragement of my study, specifically Maew, Tin, Tho, and Shining. I owe special thanks to Billy Doerner, Kelsey Breck, Jenifer Thao, David Freyer, Ellen Bryna, R K Debbarma, Gary Morrison, and Pastor Lee Kian Cheng, who spent time reading, checking and editing English of my proposal, manuscripts, and dissertation, respectively.

Finally, I specially wish to express my debt to my family, the hard life of my father, who passed away, my mother for her love and sacrifices, and my sister and brothers, who are always proud of me. I offer my deepest gratitude to my wife and my children, who have been with me.
