ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

First and foremost, I praise God, the Almighty who kindly helped me to complete my thesis. I would like to express my sincerest gratitude to German Academic Exchange Service/Deutscher Akademischer Austausch Dienst (DAAD) scholarship program by the German Government for the financial support that enabled me to pursue my studies on the field of Veterinary Public Health in Freie Universität Berlin (FU-Berlin), Germany and Chiang Mai University (CMU), Thailand through a Joint-Postgraduate programme.

I would like also to extend my deepest appreciation to my supervisors, Prof. Dr. Thomas Alter and Dr. Greta Götz, FU-Berlin and Dr. Warangkha Chaisowwong and Assist. Prof. Dr. Saruda Tiwananthagor, Associate Dean of Faculty of Veterinary Medicine, CMU for their generous support, regular guidance, and untiring supervision given during my entire study period. Special thanks also to Dr. Libertado Cruz (Executive Director), Dr. Nancy Abes (Head of the Department of Animal Health), Dr. Claro Mingala and staffs of Philippine Carabao Center and Dr. Romeo S. Gundran (Dean) and Dr. Clarissa Yvonne Domingo (Head of Molecular Biology Laboratory) and staffs of College of Veterinary Science and Medicine at Central Luzon State University for generously providing laboratory assistance during my research work in the Philippines. Thank you also to our FU-Berlin coordinator, Dr. Maximilian Baumann, and to Ms. Antje Hoppenheit and Ms. Jana Roller and staffs to their help and assistance particularly during our stay in Berlin. My heartfelt gratitude as well to our CMU-VPHCAP director, Assist Prof. Dr. Khwanchai Kreausukon, Dr. Tongkorn Meeyam and Dr. Duangporn Pichpol and staffs for their valuable assistance during our study period. I also highly appreciate the lectures and shared wisdom from distinguished professors from FU-Berlin and CMU-Thailand. Thank you so much for all the shared knowledge and insights.
