ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

There are numerous persons who have greatly contributed to this dissertation and the seven-year journey of my Ph.D. program.

Firstly, I would like to acknowledge The Royal Golden Jubilee Ph.D. Program for providing financial support to me. I am deeply indebted to every ordinary Thai people who have paid taxes through their sweat and blood.

I would like to express my deep gratitude to my supervisor, Dr. Wasan Panyagaew, for his patience, understanding, and grace. I also would like to acknowledge other dissertation advisory committee members and dissertation defense examiners: Asst. Prof. Dr. Pinkaew Laungaramsri, Dr. Apinya Feungfusakul, Prof. Dr. Katherine Bowie, and Assoc. Prof. Dr. Wattana Sugunnasil for their brilliant intellectual guidance and support.

I would like to salute every teacher I have learned from, both directly and indirectly, since I was in kindergarten. They have polished me until I become the person I am today.

My foremost gratitude goes to my uncle and my aunty who have paved the way for my education since I was young. Thank you for believing in my academic ability and serving as such role models for me.

I am grateful to Doctor of Philosophy Program in Social Science (International Program), Faculty of Social Science, Chiang Mai University and Center for Southeast Asian Studies, University of Wisconsin-Madison for providing me strong academic courses, trainings, and environments.

I wish to express my sincere thanks to Miss Narita Chaithima, the coordinator of Doctor of Philosophy Program in Social Science (International Program), for her amazing coordination.

I would like to thank my Ph.D. program cohorts, especially Pii Tubtim, Pii Ed, Pii Baitong and Pii Mam, for having fought hand in hand together and never left anyone behind throughout the program.

Special thanks also to Mr. Glyn R. Phillips for his friendship and tireless proofreading of this dissertation. I really appreciate your great contributions.

I would like to express my sincere appreciation to Assoc. Prof. Dr. Sukanya Buranadechachai, Ajarn Pongwuth Doungsri, and Asst. Prof. Chitapha Sookplum, for being my family at Burapa University as well as always providing me with endless support and encouragement. Thank you for believing in my ability and providing me with the great opportunity to teach at Communication Arts Department through which I discovered the purpose of my life and what I would pursue further in the academic career.

I want to specially thank many of my good friends in Madison, Wisconsin for giving me one of the most memorable experiences in my life: Pii Da, Pii La, David, Ajarn Dang, Anthony, Hillary, June, Sandy, Puu, Sheila, Linda, and many more. Especially Biek, Bass and Yim, I am very grateful to have both of you as my friend, brother, and sister. Our friendships will last forever.

I am very thankful for the tireless support, invaluable comments, and constructive suggestions throughout my dissertation and published paper as provided by the true friend of mine, Dr. Jan Willem de Lind van Wijngaarden. Thank you for your enthusiasm in exchanging ideas and knowledge, which have never failed to inspire me.

Most importantly, I am grateful to all thirteen research participants and other related persons for sharing me with their experiences and allowing me to be a part of their lives. I wish that this dissertation could make their voices heard and respected.
