

Studies in Curriculum Theory Series

CURRICULUM WORK AND SOCIAL JUSTICE LEADERSHIP IN A POST-RECONCEPTUALIST ERA

ATTAINING CRITICAL CONSCIOUSNESS AND LEARNING TO BECOME

Allan Michel Jales Coutinho

With a Foreword by William F. Pinar

Contents

Foreword	vii
Acknowledgements	xv
1 Introduction	1
2 Engaging in the complicated conversation of curriculum work in a post-reconceptualist era	9
2.1 Bifocalizing “Self” and “Work” as unfolding lexis, within and across contexts	14
2.2 Disrupting single thoughts	17
2.3 Confronting fears	23
2.4 Forging nexus	36
2.5 Fortifying nexus	48
2.6 Working across differences	60
2.6.1 Refusing denials	67
2.6.2 Talking with	80
2.7 Confronting dangers	87
3 A short autobiographical account about conscientização: Critically bifocalizing “self” and “work” to learn to become	101
4 Reconceptualizing the concept of “informed dialogue” in policy circles: Embracing curriculum “as lived”	110
4.1 Informed dialogue: perceiving curriculum (and everything else) as objects	115
4.1.1 The case of the school uniform	122

4.2	Complicated conversation: perceiving curriculum as subject	127
4.2.1	The case of schools' cameras, doors, and soccer courts	131
4.2.1.1	School cameras	132
4.2.1.2	Schools' doors	135
4.2.1.3	Schools' soccer courts	140
4.3	A lingering note	145
5	Valorizing the autobiographical con(text) in curriculum work to learn to become	158
6	Conclusion	171
	Index	175