

Halle Studies in the Anthropology of Eurasia

Max Planck Institute for Social Anthropology

On Money and Mettā

Economy and Morality in Urban Buddhist Myanmar

Laura Hornig

LIT

สำนักหอสมุดมหาวิทยาลัยเชียงใหม่

Laura Hornig

On Money and Mettā

Economy and Morality
in Urban Buddhist Myanmar

สำนักหอสมุด มหาวิทยาลัยเชียงใหม่
CHIANGMAI UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

LIT

Contents

	List of Illustrations	vii
	Acknowledgements	ix
	A Note on the Text	xi
1	Introduction	1
	Embedded Economies	8
	Morality-inspired Economies	11
	Access to Field Site and Methodology	15
	Pathein	19
	Overview of Chapters	23
2	Myanmar's History and Political Economy	25
	Buddhist Kingship and British Imperialism	25
	Independence and the Burmese Way to Socialism	31
	1990 until Today: From Early Market Liberalization to Recent Attempts at Democratization	35
	On Informal Economies and Civil Societies	42
3	A Moral Framework: Key Concepts of Theravāda Buddhism	47
	The Role of Religion	48
	Theravāda Cosmology and Key Concepts	50
	Beyond Dāna : Buddhism and Economic Action	60
	Morality in Family and Gender Relations	63
	Nun-human Members of the Buddhist Cosmos	69
4	The Family	73
	Introduction	73
	Autonomy and Obligations in the Family	75
	Case 1. Making Parasols: Family and Business, but not a 'Family Business'	79
	Business Ownership: Autonomy without Prestige	86
	Trading Autonomy for Goun	92

	Case 2. Maung Maung's Rice Trade: A Chinese Family Business	99
	Conclusion	108
5	The Workers	113
	Introduction	113
	Autonomy and Work	114
	The 'Good' Employer: Incentives, Responsibilities, and Obligations	120
	The Least Autonomous: Children as Economic Actors	133
	Child Workers in Thin Zar's Tea Shop	138
	Whose Fault? Moral Discourses on Child Workers	147
	Conclusion	150
6	The Community	153
	Introduction	153
	Conceptualizing Social Support	155
	Dāna and the Collective Dimensions of Buddhist Practice	160
	Daw Cho Cho: Supporting the Poor and Strengthening the Sāsana	166
	The Neighbourhood: Economic Support through Physical Proximity	173
	Between Support and Stigma: Financial Arrangements	174
	Moral Judgments: Debt, Interest Rates and the Excluded	186
	Conclusion	189
7	Conclusion	193
	Whither Myanmar?	197
	Possibilities for Future Research	203
	Bibliography	209
	Index	231