Digital Mindsets

The Analysis of a Multidimensional Construct

Contents

1	Introduction	1
1.1	The Idea of a Personal Meaning of Digitalisation	1
1.2	Digital Mindsets as Perspective and Research Deficits	3
1.3	Objectives and Contributions of this Dissertation	5
1.4	Structure of this Dissertation	7
2	Digital Mindsets: Notion, Theoretical Foundation and Examination Access	9
2.1	Locating this Work Within Research on Organisational Cognitions	9
2.2	The Notion of a Digital Mindset: a Multidimensional Understanding	12
2.2.1	The Cognitive Component	14
2.2.2	The Affective Component	15
2.2.3	The Intentional Component	15
2.2.4	The Context Specificity	16
2.2.5	Summary of the Notion of Digital Mindset	16
2.3	Theoretical Considerations on the Relationship between Cognition and Digitalisation	17
2.3.1	The Digital Working Environment as a New Cognitive Ecology	18
2.3.2	The Individual Mind as a Central Locus for the Cognition-context Interplay	19
2.3.3	Digitalisation-specific Self-perceptions as a Result of Interacting Self and Context Beliefs	21

2.3.4	The (in)compatibility of Beliefs as a Basis for Evaluating the Personal Meaning of Digitalisation	24
2.3.5	State of Research on Beliefs in the Digital Working Environment	27
2.4	The Cognitive Model of A.T. Beck as an Approach for Examination	30
2.4.1	An Adapted Conceptualisation of the Cognitive Model	31
2.4.2	The Validity of the Cognitive Model Beyond Psychotherapy	31
2.5	Summary of Considerations and Research Goals	33
3	Conducted Empirical Studies	35
3.1	Overview of Empirical Investigation and Research Strategy	37
3.2	A Qualitative Study Examining the Cognitive Component of Digital Mindsets	38
3.2.1	Goal of the Study and Research Questions	39
3.2.2	Methodology	40
3.2.3	Results	51
3.2.3.1	Cognitions triggered by digitalisation and cognitive ambivalence	52
3.2.3.2	Beliefs about the self and digitalisation triggered in employees	57
3.2.3.3	Combination and Compatibility of Beliefs	91
3.2.4	Discussion	95
3.3	Development and Pre-test of the Personal Meaning of Digitalisation Scale	99
3.3.1	Goal of the Study	100
3.3.2	Methodology	100
3.3.2.1	Item development	100
3.3.2.2	Scale Development and Survey	102
3.3.2.3	Scale Evaluation and Validity	106
3.3.3	Results	108
3.3.3.1	Preliminary Analysis	108
3.3.3.2	Factor Extraction	109
3.3.3.3	Correlation of Factors and Relation to the Big Five Personality Inventory	113
3.3.4	Discussion	116

3.4	A Quantitative Study to Investigate the Composition of Digital Mindsets	121
3.4.1	Goal of the Study and Research Questions	122
3.4.2	Research Model	125
3.4.3	Research Context	125
3.4.4	Methodology	128
	3.4.4.1 Survey Administration and Measures	128
	3.4.4.2 Latent Profile Analysis	131
3.4.5	Results	132
	3.4.5.1 Preliminary Analysis	133
	3.4.5.2 Confirmatory Factor Model	134
	3.4.5.3 Latent Profile Solution	138
3.4.6	Discussion	146
4	General Discussion and Contributions	155
4.1	Synthesis of Results in a Framework of Digital Mindsets	155
4.1.1	Attribution of Meaning to Ambivalence and (in)compatibility	157
4.1.2	Abstraction of Digitalisation-specific Self-perceptions	158
4.1.3	The Situated, Enacted and Embodied Nature of Digital Mindsets	159
4.2	Theoretical Reflection of Results	160
4.2.1	Digitalisation as a Personal Matter	161
4.2.2	Insights From Psychotherapy Provide Structure to Approach Mindsets	162
4.2.3	The Personal Meaning of Digitalisation and Ambivalence as Important Ingredient for Successful Digitalisation	163
4.2.4	Switching Cognitive Gears in Transitory but Robust Digital Mindsets	167
4.3	General Limitations	169
4.4	Research Implications and the Need for Future Research	171
4.4.1	Contributions to Research About Mindsets	171
4.4.2	Contributions to Research About Organisational Cognitions, Sensemaking and Ambiguity in the Digital Working Environment	172

4.4.3	Contributions to Research About The Digitalisation of the Working Environment and Organisational Change	173
4.4.4	Contributions to Research About Technology Acceptance	174
4.5	Practical Implications	174
4.5.1	Triggering Sensemaking Processes Regarding Digitalisation	175
4.5.2	Compensate Feared Losses Proactively	176
4.5.3	Fostering the Personal Development of Employees in Digital Transformation	176
5	Conclusion	179
