ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This thesis has completed its process with contributions and helps of many people. I first want to express my respect and very grateful to my chairperson, Prof. Dr. Yos Santasombat, for his patient support and encouragement. I appreciate his scholarly knowledge with professional experiences and, especially, his great personality. I am particularly indebted to Dr. Wasan Panyagaew who sharpens my conceptual knowledge with his keen intellects and professional guidance. I also would like to thank Ajarn Suriya Smutkupt, member of thesis committee, to help me with his kind suggestions and corrections on this thesis. I would like to send my deepest regards to many teachers at RCSD who support me with academic inspiration and help me to develop and shape my ideas into conceptual framework.

I am grateful to RCSD for financial support to study in MA program; the SEASREP Foundation for the support of Vietnamese language study through Southeast Asian Language Training Grants; and the Commission on Higher Education (CHE) for financial support through the Faculty and Student Exchange Program between Thailand and the GMS countries. All supports from these institutions have made the thesis possible. Special thanks go to Marisa, the English editor for this thesis, for her valuable comment and highly professional revision in the final phase of the thesis writing, Pong – the first person whom I always thought about whenever I got problems or questions, and all staff of RCSD and the Graduate School for their helpfulness and friendliness.

During my fieldwork in Vietnam, I would like to thank the University of Danang, Co Nguyen Thi Quynh Hoa and Thay Bui Trong Ngoan for their kind suggestion and the useful knowledge regarding Vietnamese language and culture. My deepest gratitude goes out to the participants of this thesis. I want to thank them for releasing their words, sharing their valuable experiences, and good lesson learn about living a life in the world. I could have never written this paper without their kind involvement. Thousand thanks also give to Nguyen Thi Thu Xinh for pleasant relationship and meaningful involvement to resolve any difficulties during the fieldwork; La Hoai Nam and Umarat Nilaphan for their tireless help and being my great friends; Hoang Quoc Xuan Vinh for his generosity and guidance with a lot of document from his office. This is in addition to some friends from the class of Thai language 2005, the Danang Union of Friendship Association. Their offerings of friendship and sincere enriched my life and emotion during in Vietnam.

My sincere thanks go to special friends: Chanida Chitbundit for her true friendship wherever I stay; Sokhom Yeang for his kind encouragement whatever I do. This thesis has received a lot of their material and emotional support despite physical distance. I also thank many friends and classmates who have made my time in Chiang Mai so colorful and memorable.

Mostly, I would like to thank my own family who encourage me at any times in any situations. While I appreciate life stories of participants in the thesis, I can also appreciate my own life stories fulfilled by them since my childhood. The long thesis may be concluded by short words of my aunt, “No matter how many thousand miles you travel, you have to return home once and for all.” Following the completion of the study I can see myself returning to family with deepened admiration and understanding. Needless to say, I dedicate this thesis to them.
